Free Audio Books If you're looking for free audio books, the web is the best place to find them. There are plenty of sites that offer free audiobooks that are in the public domain, read by very talented narrators (I wouldn't suggest listening to the books narrated by computers; they sound very odd and take away from the story, in my opinion).

You can download these stories directly onto your computer and put them on your iPod or other mobile device, burn them onto a CD to listen to in the car, etc. Here are some of the best sources to find free audio books on the web:

Free Classic Audio Books: Many classic stories here (Mark Twain, Lewis Carroll, etc.).

Librivox is a fantastic place to find audio books. This is usually the first place I go to find books for my iPod. link:librivox.org

Podiobooks is an interesting way to get audio books; they offer complete books in episodic form so you can get just a chapter at a time via RSS or by iTunes; in addition, you can simply click and listen to a story online. link:www.podiobooks.com

OpenCulture Free Audio books: Long list of really good free audio books here; you can also find poetry and podcasts here. link:www.openculture.com/freeaudiobooks

AudioBooksForFree is a large site that offers hundreds of audio books for free download; the only hitch is that their books and lectures come in small files (you can download a book all at once for a fee).
